

May 24, 1962

1912 Dates J-BK

Battle: Winchester

Confed T. J. Jackson

w/18,000

lost 400

defeated

Banks

w/5000

lost 904

May 25, 1862

Jackson routs the Union forces at Winchester, Virginia.

May 25, 1862

1912 Dates J-BK

KERNSTOWN OR WINCHESTER

Major General Jackson, with a Confederate Army numbering 15,000 was stationed at Kernstown, Va., while a Federal Army of 5,000, under General Banks, occupied Winchester, a village near Kernstown. On May 25, 1862 Banks made an attack and after a desperate struggle the Federals were compelled to to retreat with a loss of 906 men.

The Confederate loss was 400 men.

Sun. May 25, 1862

At daybreak, Jackson routed Banks at Winchester, gave hot pursuit to the "mass of disordered fugitives", was at one time on the point of destroying the entire force and finally drove them across the Potomac River.

The federal gov. sent to governors to call up militia.

May 27, 1862

1912 Dates J-BK

HAND VER Court House

During Civil War in U.S. a battle was fought at Honora Court House 17 mi north of Richmond, Va. between Federals led by General Porter and Confederates commanded by General Branch. The Federals were outnumbered, but they defeated their opponents.

May 29, 1862

1912 Dates J-BK

CORINTH, MISS.

After the battle of Pittsburgh Landing and the capture of Island No. 10, the Federal forces united and moved toward Corinth, Miss. At their approach the Confederates abandoned Corinth and fled with their stores and communication.

May 31, 1862

Johnston resolved to strike the two Federal Corps on the Richmond side of the swollen Chickahomney.

After midday he attacked 2 Corps with vigor despite the mud, drove them back and came near inflicting on them a crushing defeat [Battle of Fair Oaks or Seven Pines]. But

General Sumner saved the day. He at once marched his 2 divisions to his two bridges, halted and anxiously awaited further movements. Word at last came to cross the river. Sumner's Corps went over the swaying and tottering bridges and preserved the Union left wing from rout. The Southern Army suffered a grievous loss in the severe wounding of General Johnston, who was knocked from his horse by the fragment of a shell near the end of the fight & borne insensuous from the field.

May 31, 1862

Pres. Jefferson Davis
appointed Gen. Robert E. Lee to command the 50,000 - man Confederate Army that was trying to protect Richmond from the 100,000
Union troops.

Lee took place of Gen. Joseph E.
Johnston who was wounded.
He had never before commanded an Army in Army batts and had been under fire only twice.

He was born Jan 19, 1807
died Oct 12, 1870

May 31 - June 1, 1862

Battle of Seven Pines (Fair Oaks)
Virginia

May 31, June 1, 1962

1912 Dates J-BK

Battle: Seven Pines - Fair Oaks

Confed J.E. Johnston

wt 35,000

loss 6697

defeated

McClellan

~~wt 11,000~~

wt 11,000

loss 5,739

Sept 17, 1862

Battle of Antietam (Sharpsburg)

Confederates under Gen. Robert E. Lee (Jan. 19, 1807 - Oct 12, 1870) defeated by Union forces under Gen. George
B. McClellan (Dec. 3, 1826 - Oct 29, 1885)
in what is said to be bloodiest day of the U.S. Civil War.